A Bit About Rum

Rum originated in the West Indies and is first mentioned in records from Barbados in about 1650 and called kill-devil or rumbullion but by 1667 was simply called rum.

Rum is a distilled alcoholic drink made by fermenting and then distilling sugarcane molasses or sugarcane juice.

Primarily produced in Jamaica, Barbados, and Demerara, Guyana the heavy, dark, full-bodied rums are the oldest type and have a strong molasses flavour.

Production of dry, light-bodied rum began in the late 19th century and is pale in colour and mild in flavour. A gold-label rum is amber in colour, has a sweeter flavour as a result of longer ageing and adding caramel.
